A FATAL FEUD

Over a Fortune of $100,000—Five Shots in a Brother-in-Law.

CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—A New York Sun's Chicago special says: To-night a fatal street affray between brothers-in-law ended a remarkable contest for the possession of a fortune of $100,000. The contest thus ended in a tragedy began with an elopement. Alfred Richner several years ago was the husband of a noted keeper of a disorderly house. Notwithstanding his marital relations and his unsavory record Richner succeeded in clandestinely working himself into the good graces of a daughter of a wealthy flour and feed dealer named Kessler. Upon Kessler's death the daughter, who seems to have been somewhat simple-minded, disclosed her attachment for Richner. The opposition of the family to any recognition of that person resulted in a prompt elopement of the couple to Montreal. Richner later went through the form of obtaining a divorce from his wife in Chicago and having his marriage with Miss Kessler legalized. The couple returned to Chicago, and a feud was engendered between Richner and his new wife's brother. The former accused Richner of being actuated solely with a desire to lay hands on the fortune of his sister. Legal struggles and personal encounters between Richner and young Kessler have been frequent, the latest, prior to this evening being in the court room, where Richner, apparently to place his brother-in-law in a ridiculous light, emptied a small sack of flour on his head. Recently it is said Richner, failing in his efforts to get at the Kessler patrimony, has threatened to kill every member of the family. To-night he met young Kessler on State street and attacked him with a cane. Kessler drew a revolver and rapidly fired three shots. Two were stopped by Richner's watch, but at the third he dropped and Kessler immediately put two more bullets in his sister's husband while the latter was prostrated. The shooting took place in a crowded part of State street, and for a few moments caused a stampede of passers-by. Kessler gave himself up to the authorities. He said he had been advised to arm himself by the chief of detectives, and by his attorney, J. C. Black. Notwithstanding his wounds, Richner clung to life tenaciously, and his first words on regaining consciousness were that he be allowed to see his wife. He can survive but a few hours.

An immense assortment of Kensington Art Squares, all sizes, just received by John Weiler, 51 to 55 Fort street.

AMERICAN DISPATCHES.

THREE BELL BOYS MAKE A BIG HAUL OF CASH.

They Rob the Bookmakers of $12,800—An Exquimaux Murderer Executed Twelve Hours After He Committed the Crime—Guatemalian Treaty Ratified.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—A remarkable case of cool criminal logic came out in the police court to-day on the examination of the three bellboys of the Hotel Vendôme, arrested in connection with the stealing of the $12,800 contained in the strong-box of the Chicago bookmakers, Carland & Saunders. One of the bellboys turned state's evidence, and told how Henry Cassin, the chief prisoner, secured possession of the money. Oscar Matthews in an affidavit tells the story referred to. He says that Cassin approached him several times with a plan to take the box from the safe. He said he would be willing to receive ten years to get the money, which he could hide and use when released from jail. Matthews told him to do it himself, as he would have nothing to do with it. Cassin told him he could easily get at the box, as he knew the combination of the safe. Cassin was held in $10,000 bail and Matthews was sent to the house of detention.

Quick Justice.

BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 23.—Word has just been received from Point Barrow, in the Arctic Ocean, that Joseph George, a Portugese, in the employ of the Pacific Whaling Co., was murdered there on June 1st, by Esquimaux, who had grown jealous of George's attention to an Esquimaux woman. The murderer was condemned by a court of enquiry and shot within twelve hours after the murder.

Not In Their Line.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Sun's Berlin special says: An attempt to introduce horse racing at Cologne was made on Tuesday, but proved a dead failure, only about 500 people assembled to witness the sport and most of them declined to pay for admission, as they could see the races from surrounding fields.

To Be Unravelled.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Herald's Washington special says: The official report of Minister Mizner, together with all facts concerning the shooting of Barrundia on the American steamer Acapulca will be sent into the House either to-day or Tuesday, in answer to Congressman McCraney's resolution calling for papers.

Trouble Among the Elect.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 23.—The little town of Lathrop, Mo., is all torn up over a church scandal. The Rev. Dr. Carmichael is pastor of the Baptist church to which all the prominent people in the town and vicinity belong. His wife, Mrs. Carmichael, was very prominent two months ago in the raids on saloons made by women. Immediately after these raids the enemies of the leader of the ladies convinced her husband that she had been unfaithful to him. He brought suit and got a divorce. About half of the members of the church espoused the cause of the preacher's wife, while the rest stood by the preacher. A meeting was held last night and charges were made against warm friends of Mrs. Carmichael. The accused were taken completely by surprise. They were charged with insubordination, upholding an excluded member, and associating with an adultress. All of them were expelled from the church with very little ceremony. Pastor Carmichael's faction had a majority of only two over the Mrs. Carmichael faction. Every Baptist woman's character is getting a hauling over by the gossips, and several slander suits are likely to follow. The evidence against Mrs. Carmichael has never amounted to more than suspicion, and is not thought to be susceptible of proof.

Treaty Ratified.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The Herald's City of San Salvador special says the Salvador congress to-day ratified in full treaty of peace between this country and Guatemala as formulated by the diplomatic corps, with the exception of articles three and four, which are to be reformed by a commission to be sent to Guatemala for that purpose.

A Special Representative Wanted.

A New York Herald's City of Mexico special says: Senor Poli, who leaves here in a few days for Washington as Salvador's representative in the United States, carries with him letters to Secretary Blaine requesting the United States to name a special and separate representative of that country to Salvador.

Rather Complicated.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—No conference on the tariff bill was held to-day. The Republican confreres held a long meeting this morning, the principal point of discussion being the sugar schedule, though the action of southern Republicans last night in demanding that special taxes on tobacco be removed was considered as a new complication. When the meeting broke up nothing had been accomplished.

Aspenwall Destroyed.

GALVESTON, Texas, Sept. 23.—Panama advices state that Aspenwall is being destroyed by fire and a large part of the town has succumbed to the flames. J. B. Houston & Co., of this city received a despatch stating that the fire was under control. Damage is being confined to Front street. The Panama Railway freight house, the Market and Pacific Mail steamship companies, properties are safe.

A Stirring Up.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 23.—Six distinct shocks of earthquake, accompanied by a rumbling sound, occurred here about six o'clock this morning. They appeared to come from the south, and the last shock lasted nearly a minute.

The Pillory.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Three hundred spectators witnessed the whipping at Newcastle to-day of six negroes and two whites for larcenies, who received from five to twenty lashes each. The negro, George Cooper, came to the post wearing patented leather shoes and nobby trousers, and took twenty lashes without exhibiting much uneasiness. Frank Stanton, a white man, after his twentieth lash, coolly drew a cigar from his pocket and lighted it. Besides the whippings, George Cooper, the colored burglar, Jon Boyd, colored, convicted of murderous assult, and Samuel Long, for forgery, each stood one hour in the pillory.

THE BURKED MILL.

Considered by Many to be Simply a Swindling Game.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—A special to the World from London says: When the principals in the fight were discussing what action to take in court, McAuliffe's backers suggested that it would be a good idea to take the gloves into court and let the justice see them. This Secretary Creighton declined to do. Every move he made seemed to be for delay. The general opinion is that the Ormonde club does not and never did intend to have the fight come off in the club house. Even if it is obliged to refund the cost of the tickets to subscribers, it can retain about $3,000, paid as initiation fees by new members who joined the club expressly to see the fight. A gentleman who is authorized to speak for Temple, tried hard to-night to disseminate the impression that the suppression was due to secret information given to the police by some member of the club, but nobody believed him. Billy Madden was almost heartbroken. He and McAuliffe came here without much money, having actually gone in debt for expenses in training. There seems to be no doubt that both principals are innocent of any trickery, however much their backers may have indulged in the supposed crooked work.

AN IMPOSTOR'S SUCCESS.

The Greater the Fraud the More Fools Who Believe in It.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 23.—Impostor Schweinfurth's so-called "heaven" is at present without a head, its master having left for a vacation. During his absence the affairs of this latter-day paradise are under the direction of Dr. Smith, Apostle Grandy and Father Weldon, and if any of the angels get gay, depend upon it they will be promptly reported to the lord upon his return, for no foolishness is allowed in "heaven." The "vacation" of Schweinfurth has had the effect of reviving local interest in the place. The wave of indignation that swept over the city when Mrs. Medore Kinnehan left in disgust and anger the culinary department and made her damaging disclosures soon subsided. Well knowing that there were no legal means by which he could be reached, and realizing that the most iniquitous of his transactions would not arouse those opposed to him to acts of violence, Schweinfurth has since continued the routine of his operations at the farm with impunity. The committee appointed at a public meeting to investigate his case has never been heard of since. Even Dr. S. L. Conde, the divine who stood ready to lead a crusade against the citadel of sin, has nothing more to say.

It is understood that Schweinfurth will visit several branches of the church at other points, especially at Alpena, Mich., where the society is on the verge of disintegration by reason of the disclosures of Mrs. Kinnehan. Alpena is where Schweinfurth first began to feel the manifestations of "power." It is also the place where some lumbermen threw him into the water with a command to walk upon it if he were the messiah, and nearly drowned him before he was rescued. It is said also that Schweinfurth is experiencing trouble at other points.

During the absence of Schweinfurth Apostle Grandy is trying to convince the public that little Myrtle, the child recently born at Mt. Zion to Mary Weldon, is not Schweinfurth's—could not be his by any possibility. The disciples have taken the date of the birth of the child and the date of Miss Weldon's absence in Detroit, and figured out that Schweinfurth could not have been the child's father. Just before departing Schweinfurth was called into Squire Weld's temple of justice by a garnish summons issued at the instance of Garver & Fisher, the lawyers employed by Mrs. Kinnehan, when she shook from her sandals the rich loam of Schweinfurth's Eden. The lawyers succeeded in inducing Schweinfurth to disgorge her household effects, but he still retains her watch and jewelry. Then Mrs. Kinnehan repented, and again sought the shelter of the home at the Weldon farm. But the spirit of rebellion again rose within her, and the next day stole into the city with her little boy and went to the home of her mother in Kentucky. Before going she neglected to settle with her lawyers, and they have determined, if possible, to obtain possession of the valuables remaining in the hands of Schweinfurth. He asked for a continuance that he might not be delayed in taking his vacation, and it was granted. When Schweinfurth returns it is expected that he will make a fight to retain the jewelry. Schweinfurth's intentions, so far as known, are to continue business at the old stand. It is too profitable to give up. There is no danger of his closing out the church triumphant unless Dr. Conde succeeds in getting a special act of the legislature that will make the punishment fit the crime.

CELMAN IMPRISONED.

THE EX-PRESIDENT OF BUENOS AYRES AN EMBEZZLER.

He Honors Bonds to the Amount of $1,000,000 for His Own Use—Slavin and McAuliffe Bound Over to Keep the Peace—Two Quick Trips Across the Atlantic.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 23.—The City of New York was reported off Fastnet at 9 a.m. Time, 5 days 22 hours 25 minutes. The Teutonic reported off Fastnet at 10.30 a.m. Time, 5 days 23 hours and 25 minutes.

The Game Up.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Slavin and McAuliffe had a further hearing in the Lambeth police Court this morning, and both were bound over in the sum of £1000 each to keep the peace on one surety and £1000 each to appear if called upon. If a breach of the peace is committed, warrants will be issued and the case sent before the judges.

Above Reproach.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—It is learned on good authority that the case of O'Brien, arrested for circulating a story that Prince George had taken part in a street fight, will be discontinued, and the Governor-General has received instructions from the Queen to see this is done. It is said Her Majesty disapproves of proceedings being taken against a subject for a private offence against a member of the Royal family, holding that their dignity is beyond peradventure and cannot be affected by a scurrilous story.

Wholesale Boodle.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The latest news which has been received in this city from Buenos Ayres contains a forecast of the proposed impeachment of Juarez Celman, ex-president of the republic, for his embezzlement of public moneys while in office. An inquiry is now proceeding for the purpose of discovering where he placed his fortune of $4,000,000, which he realized while his fingers held the purse strings of the country. In the meantime, his wife is carefully guarded, and his release from custody appears to depend entirely upon his disgorgement of his alleged ill-gotten wealth.

Devastating Floods.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Floods in the department of Gard caused much damage to property on Sunday. The river rhone rose 19 feet, and the town of Beaucaire was flooded. At Valleringue on Herault, thirty-nine miles northwest of Nimes, the river overflowed its banks and undermined a portion of the cemetery. A number of coffins were washed out, and together with their contents flowed down the river. The Ardeche river is in high flood at Aubenas, the dyke collapsed and the surrounding country inundated. Houses were undermined by the waters and fell, and vineyards throughout the district are devastated. Three districts are devastated. Three persons have been killed. The Garden river in department of Gard has also overflowed its banks and the country along its banks together with its standing crops, the enormous Swamp Mausseau bridge is carried away, and the railroad and telegraph service stopped along the Rhone in the department of Vaucluse, Avignon and Caderousse districts submerged, and work shops and factories closed.

A Glut of Suicides.

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—Major Von Norman, commandant of the cadets' school in this city, committed suicide last night. He took a dose of poison and then opened some arteries in his body. The suicide of Major Norman following so closely on several other startling suicides by prominent persons within the past week, has caused a profound sensation.

Buried the Hatchet.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Sept. 23.—The Steamship Owners' Association has concluded a three years' agreement with the engineers.

LONDON GOSSIP.

Strikes Generally Successful—Moussa Bey Will not Down.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—John Burns, addressing a large labor meeting at Battersea yesterday, declared that out of two thousand strikes during 1889 only fifty had been unsuccessful. He regarded the outlook as highly encouraging for a great improvement in the condition of workmen. The activity with which the organization of labor is progressing is indicated by the fact that 187 new unions have been registered during the past twenty months. A number of mass meetings were held yesterday in the provinces, chiefly at Liverpool and Glasgow, to protest against the arrest of the Irish leaders.

Gilbert and Sullivan's opera, "The Gondoliers," was produced for the first time on the continent at Vienna on Saturday night, and failed to satisfy the taste of the critical Viennese. The piece was in fact roundly hissed.

Reports of Australian state railways show largely increased traffic and profits since the introduction of uniform low fares.

John Morley, the eminent Liberal, will visit Gladstone at Hawarden to consult with him on the changed aspect of the Irish situation. Morley will then return to Ireland and study the condition of the people.

The North German Gazette and Hamburger Nachrichten refer in harsh terms to the unfriendly attitude of leading English journals, especially the Times, in their criticisms on the alleged establishment of the slave trade by the Germans in East Africa. It is held that the facts don't justify the remarks that have been made over the matter.

Armenians in England are greatly pleased at the capture of Moussa Bey, and the prospect of his being sent in exile to Mecca, where he can no longer bribe and cajole to their disadvantage. Armenians in London say they don't desire the execution of Moussa, as his death would be a signal for the rising of Kurds and the massacre of Christians. He is a much more important person than is generally supposed. Nominally he is a petty Turkish official, but really he is chief of the Kurds in Armenia. His office was conferred upon him in the vain hope that he might be restrained by it. He made no pretence of performing any of the duties attached to it, but spent his time raiding elsewhere. He is, in short, a robber chief, and not a corrupt official. As the Kurds are in the majority in Armenia, the extent of his power can hardly be exaggerated. Moussa Bey is a young and good-looking man, very pleasant and courteous to talk to. He is a very strict Mohammedan, and as a result, he is much respected by the more fanatical Turks and the Turks of Mosque as they are called, and it would be dangerous for the Turkish Government to deal harshly with him if it decided to do so, as he went to Constantinople with the style and retinue of a prince, and took with him a very large sum in cash. The ruling class don't desire his overthrow.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—General Boulanger's forthcoming reply to his detractors will consist of a book containing about 200 pages.

Advices from Cairo state that the Egyptian cotton crop is expected to show a heavy yield. The quality of the product is excellent throughout.

Three persons were killed and eleven injured by the explosion of a petroleum lamp in a workmen's house at Berlin yesterday.

Cheques amounting to $75,000 drawn on Middlesboro firms have been stolen while in transit from London.

Forty-eight seamen have been sent from Hamburg to Southampton to take the places of unionists. Trouble is expected when the men arrive, but if the movement is successful, a general weeding out of union men will gradually take place.

Excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Mantche, Austria, by the discovery of an enormous deposit of quicksilver. There is a great influx of people and much speculation in land.

Newly formed shipping federation now embraces almost the whole of the ship owning interests of the United Kingdom. It's objects are to deal with labor questions of all kinds; to protect officers, crews and servants of ship owners against intimidation on the part of trades organizations or their members; to counteract the efforts of agitators against shipping interests; to deal with cases of conspiracy and to indemnify ship owners whose vessels are detained by authority of or in consequence of measures taken by the federation. Other industries more or less associated with shipping are connecting themselves with the movement, and it is believed that the shipping interests throughout the British colonies will join the federation. It is virtually a vast mutual insurance company against unfair strikes. Free labor agents, of whom there are already many in Great Britain, will be encouraged to keep lists of non-union men willing to be employed in event of strikes. Such men will be employed at higher wages if necessary. The trades that belong to the unionists federation has adopted for its motto "Defence not defiance." Operations are to be controlled from a central office in London and immediate relief supplied in any part of the three kingdoms. The federation asserts that vast numbers of trade unionists have joined or remain in their societies solely because they are afraid of standing aloof from them, and they would willingly free themselves from control of trade organization and be content to make their own bargains with their employers if they felt themselves at liberty to do so.

THE CAPITAL.

Lord Stanley Thinks Canadians Equal to the Occasion.

Special to the TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—The Canada Central exhibition was formally opened here to-day by His Excellency the Governor-General. Prior to visiting the grounds, Lord Stanley was entertained at luncheon by the directors of the affair. All cabinet ministers in the city, including the Premier, were present. In reply to the toast of his health, Lord Stanley took occasion to refer to the McKinley bill, stating that while its being put in operation would injuriously affect the agricultural community of Canada, he was very much mistaken in the people of Canada if they would not go to work and seek out new avenues for their commerce elsewhere. Although he did not often refer to political speeches, still he endorsed what was said by the finance minister on a recent occasion in regard to this bill. Lord Stanley then drove to the grounds, where he was presented with an address, to which he replied, and was followed by Sir John Macdonald. The weather is excellent, although threatening rain.

Col. Prior, M.P., arrived here. Mr Corbould, M.P., is in the city.

"You see," said Collingsby, "the ship was saved this way: Miss Redington and I were standing on deck when we struck the iceberg. I didn't know her very well, but when the boat struck she was thrown violently into my arms." "Very exciting," remarked Polingsby. "But how did that save the ship?" "Why, you see," replied Collingsby, "it broke the ice."—Elmira Gazette.

Off in Peril.

Lives of children are often endangered by sudden and violent attacks of cholera, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentry, and bowel complaints. A reasonable and certain precaution is to keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry always at hand.

CHAPTER XVII.

The morning report of the following day showed some items under the head of "Alterations" that involved several of the soldier characters of this story. Ex-Sergeant Clancy had been dropped from the column of present "on daily duty" and taken up on that of absent without leave. Lieut. Hayne was also reported absent. Dr. Pease and Lieut. Billings drove into the garrison from town just before the cavalry trumpets were sounding first call for guard mounting, and the adjutant sent one of the musicians to give his compliments to Mr. Royce and ask him to mount the guard for him, as he had just returned and had important business with the colonel. The doctor and the adjutant together went into the colonel's quarters, and for the first time on record the commanding officer was not at the desk in his office when the shoulder straps began to gather for the matinee.

"NEVER MIND! DON'T FIRE!"

Ten minutes after the usual time the adjutant darted in and plunged with his characteristic impetuosity into the pile of passes and other papers stacked up by the sergeant-major at his table. To all questions as to where he had been and what was the matter with the colonel he replied, with more than usual asperity of manner—the asperity engendered of some years of having to answer the host of questions propounded by vacant minds at his own busiest hour of his day—that the colonel would tell them all about it himself; he had no time for a word. The evident manner of suppressed excitement, however, was something few failed to note, and every man in the room felt certain, that when the colonel came there would be a revelation. It was with something bordering on indignation, therefore, that the assemblage heard the words that intimated to them that all might retire. The colonel had come in very quietly, received the report of the officer of the day, relieved him, and dismissed the new officer of the day with the brief formula, "Usual orders, sir," then glanced quickly around the silent circle of grave, bearded or boyish faces. His eyes rested for an instant with something like shock and trouble upon one face, pale, haggard, with almost bloodless lips, and yet full of fierce determination—a face that haunted him long afterwards, it was so full of agony, of suspense, almost of pleading—the face of Capt. Rayner

Then, dispensing with the customary talk, he quietly spoke the disappointing words:

"I am somewhat late this morning, gentlemen, and several matters will occupy my attention; so I will not detain you further."

The crowd seemed to find their feet very slowly. There was visible disinclination to go. Every man in some inexplicable way appeared to know that there was a new mystery hanging over the garrison, and that the colonel held the key. Every man felt that Billings had given him the right to expect to be told all about it when the colonel came. Some looked reproachfully at Billings, as though to remind him of their expectations. Stannard, his old stand by, passed him with a gruff "Thought you said the colonel had something to tell us," and went out with an air of injured and defrauded dignity.

Rayner arose, and seemed to be making preparation to depart with the others, and some of the number, connecting him unerringly with the prevailing sensation, appeared to hold back and wait for him to precede them and so secure to themselves the satisfaction of knowing that, if it war a matter connected with Rayner, they "had him along" and nothing could take place without the hearing it. These men were very few, however; but Buxton was one of them. Rayner's eyes were fixed upon the colonel and searching for a sign, and it came—a little motion of the hand and a nod of the head that signified "Stay." Then, as Buxton and one or two of his dallied irresolute, the colonel, turned somewhat sharply to them: "Was there any matter on which you wished to see me, gentlemen?" and, as there was none, they had to go go. Then Rayner was alone with the colonel; for Mr. Billings quickly arose, and, with a significant look at his commander, left the room and closed the door.

Mrs. Rayner, gazing from her parlor windows, saw that all the officers had come out except one—her husband—and with a moan of misery she covered her face with her hands and sank upon the sofa. With cheeks as white as her sister's, with eyes full of trouble and perplexity, but tearless, Nellie Travers stepped quickly in the room and put a trembling white hand upon the other's shoulder:

"Kate, it is no time for so bitter an estrangement as this. I have done simply what our soldier father would have done had he been here. I am fully aware of what it must cost me. I knew when I did it that you would never again welcome me to your home. Once east again, you and I can go our ways; I won't burden you longer; but is it not better that you should tell me in what way your husband or you can have been injured by what I have done?"

Mrs. Rayner impatiently shook away the hand.

"I don't want to talk to you," was the blunt answer. "You have carried out your threat and—ruined us; that's all."

What can you mean? Do you want me to think that because Mr. Hayne's innocence may be established your husband was the guilty man? Certainly your manner leads to that inference, though his does not, by any means."

"I don't want to talk, I tell you. You've had your way—you've won. You'll see soon enough the hideous web of trouble you've entangled about my husband. Don't you dare say—don't you dare think"—and now she rose with sudden fury—"that he was the—that he lost the money! But that's what all others will think."

"If that were true, Kate, there would be this difference between his trouble and Mr. Hayne's: Capt. Rayner would have wife, wealth, and friends, to help him bear the cross; Mr. Hayne has borne it five long years unaided. I pray God the truth has been brought to light."

What fierce reply Mrs. Rayner might have given, who knows? but at that instant a quick step was heard on the piazza, the door opened suddenly, and Capt. Rayner entered with a rush. The pallor had gone; a light of eager, half incredulous joy beamed from his eyes, he threw his cap upon the floor, and his wife had risen and thrown her arms about his neck.

"Have they found him?" was her breathless question. What has happened? You look so different."

"Found him? Yes; and he has told everything."

"Told—what?"

"Told that he and Gower were the men. They took it all."

"Clancy—and Gower! The thieves, do you mean? Is that—is that what he confessed?" she asked, in wild wonderment, in almost stupefied amaze, releasing him from her arms and stepping back, her eyes searching his face.

"Nothing else in the world, Kate. I don't understand it at all. I'm all a tremble yet. It clears Hayne utterly. It at least explains how I was mistaken. But what—what could she have meant?"

Mrs. Rayner stood like one in a dream, her eyes staring, her lips quivering; and Nellie, with throbbing pulses and clasping hands looked eagerly from husband to wife, as though beseeching some explanation.

"What did she mean? What did she mean? I say again," asked Rayner, pressing his hand to his forehead and gazing fixedly at his wife.

A moment longer she stood there, as though a light—a long hidden truth—were slowly forcing itself upon her mind. Then, with impulsive movement she hurried through the dining room, threw open the kitchen door, and startled the domestics at their late breakfast.

"Ryan," she called to the soldier servant who rose hastily from the table, "Go and tell Mrs. Clancy I want her instantly. Do you understand? Instantly!" And Ryan seized his forage cap and vanished.

It was perhaps ten minutes before he returned. When he did so it was apparent that Mrs. Rayner had been crying copiously, and that Miss Travers, too was much affected The captain was pacing the room with nervous strides in mingled relief and agitation. All looked up expectant as the soldier re-entered. He had the air of a man who knew he bore tidings of vivid and mysterious interest, but he curbed the excitement of his manner until it shone only through his snapping eyes, saluted, and reported with professional gravity:

"Mrs. Clancy's clean gone, sir."

"Gone where?"

"Nobody knows, sir. She's just lit out with her trunk and best clothes some time last night."

"Gone to her husband in town, maybe?"

"No, sir. Clancy's all right; he was caught last evening, and hadn't time to get mor'n half drunk before they lodged him. Lootenant Hayne got him, sir. They had him afore a justice of the peace early this morning"——

"Yes, I know all that. What I want is Mrs. Clancy. What has become of her?"

"Faith, I don't know, sir, but the women in Sudsville they all say she's run away, sir—taken her money and gone. She's afraid of Clancy's peaching on her."

"By heavens! the thing is clearing itself!" exclaimed Rayner to his gasping and wild eyed wife. "I must go to the colonel at once with his news." And away he went.

And then again, as the orderly retired, and the sisters were left alone, Nellie Travers with trembling lips asked the question:

"Have I done so much harm, after all, Kate?"

"Oh, Nellie! Nellie! forgive me, for I have been nearly mad with misery!" was Mrs. Rayner's answer, as she burst into a fresh paroxysm of tears. "That, that woman has—has told me fearful lies."

There was a strange scene that day at Warrener when, towards noon, two carriages drove out from town and, entering the east gate, rolled over towards the guard house. The soldiers clustered about the barrack porches and stared at the occupants. In the first—a livery hack from town—were two sheriff's officers, while cowering on the back seat, his hat pulled down over his eyes, was poor old Clancy, to whom clung faithful little Kate. In the rear carriage—Maj. Waldron's—were Mr. Hayne, the major, and a civilian whom some of the men had no difficulty in recognizing as the official charged with the administration of justice towards offenders against the peace. Many of the soldiers strolled slowly up the road, in hopes of hearing all about the arrest, and what it meant, from straggling members of the guard. All knew it meant something more than a mere "break" on the part of Clancy; all felt that it had some connection with the long continued mystery that hung about the name of Lieut. Hayne.

Then, too, it was being noised abroad that Mrs. Clancy had "skipped," but between two suns had fled for parts unknown. She could be overhauled by telegraph if she had left on either of the night freights or gone down towards Denver by the early morning passenger train; it would be easy enough to capture her if she were "wanted," said the garrison; but what did it mean that Clancy was pursued by officers of the post and brought back under charge of officers of the law? He had had trouble enough, poor fellow!

The officer of the guard looked wonderingly at the carriages and their occupants. He saluted Maj. Waldron as the latter stepped briskly down.

"You will take charge of Clancy, Mr. Graham," said the major. "His discharge will be recalled; at least it will not take effect to-day. You will be interested in knowing that his voluntary confession fully establishes Mr. Hayne's innocence of the charges on which he was tried."

Mr. Graham's face turned all manner of colors. He glanced at Hayne, who, still seated in the carriage, was as calmly indifferent to him as ever; he was gazing across the wide parade at the windows in officers' row. Little Kate's sobs as the soldiers were helping her father from the carriage suddenly recalled his wandering thoughts. He sprang to the ground, stepped quickly to the child and put his arms about her.

"Clancy, tell her to come with us. Mrs. Waldron will take loving care of her, and she shall come to see you every day. The guard house is no place for her to follow you. Tell her so, man, and she will go with us. Come, Katie, child!" And he bent tenderly over the sobbing little waif.

"Thank ye, sir. I know ye'll be good to her. Go with the lootenant, Kate, darlin', go. Shure I'll be happier then."

And, trembling, he bent and kissed her wet cheeks. She threw her arms around his neck and clung to him in an agony of grief. Gently they strove to disengage her clasping arms, but she shrieked and struggled, and poor old Clancy broke down. There were sturdy soldiers standing by who turned their heads away to hide the unbidden tears, and with a quiver in his kind voice the major interposed:

"Let her stay awhile; it will be better for both. Don't put him in the prison room, Graham. Keep them by themselves for a while. We will come for her by and by." And then, before them all, he held forth his hand and gave Clancy's a cordial grasp.

"Cheer up, man. You've taken the right step at last. You are a free man to-day, even if you are a prisoner for the time being. Better this a thousand times than what you were."

Hayne, too, spoke a few kind words in a low tone, and gave the old soldier his hand at parting. Then the guard closed the door, and father and daughter were left alone. As the groups around the guard house began to break up and move away, and the officers, re-entering the carriages, drove over to headquarters, a rollicking Irishman called to the sergeant of the guard.

"Does he know the ould woman's skipped, sargent? Shure, you'd better tell him. 'Twill cheer him, like."

But when, a few moments after, the news was imparted to Clancy, the effect was electric and startling. With one bound and a savage cry he sprang to the door. The sergeant threw himself upon him and strove to hold him back, but was no match for the frenzied man. Deaf to Kate's entreaties and the sergeant's commands, he hurled him aside, leaped through the doorway, shot like a deer past the lolling guardsmen on the porch, and, turning sharply, went at the top of his speed down the hill towards Sudsville before man could lay hand on him. The sentry on Number One cocked his rifle and looked inquiringly at the officer of the guard, who came running out. With a wild shriek little Kate threw herself upon the sentry, clasping her knees and imploring him not to shoot.

The lieutenant and sargeant both shouted, "Never mind! Don't fire!" and with others of the guard rushed in pursuit. But, old and feeble as he was, poor Clancy kept the lead, never swerving, never flagging, until he reached the doorway of his abandoned cot; this he burst in, threw himself upon his knees by the bedside, and dragged to light a little wooden chest that stood by an open trap in the floor. One look sufficed; the mere fact that the trap was open and the box exposed was enough. With a wild cry of rage, despair and baffled hatred, he clinched his hands above his head, rose to his full height, and with a curse upon his white lips, with glaring eyes and gasping breath, turned upon his pursuers as they came running in, and hurled his fists at the foremost. "Let me follow her, I say! She's gone with it all—his money! Let me go!" he shrieked; and then his eyes turned stony, a gasp, a clutch at his throat, and, plunging headlong, he fell upon his face at their feet.

Poor little Kate! The old man was indeed free at last.

THE LAKE OF DEATH.

A Mysterious Sheet of Water Within No Living Thing Can Survive.

"Devil's Lake," in Calhoun County, Ala., seventy miles east of Birmingham, is one of the most remarkable natural curiosities to be found in America. The lake is oval in shape and covers about four acres of ground. No vegetation of any kind grows on its banks and nothing lives in its waters. Even snakes and terrapins shun the waters of Devil's Lake, and fish placed in it die in a few hours. The water is clear limestone, with a peculiar taste, which makes it unpalatable to man or beast. Horses and cows will not drink it, no matter how thirsty they may be.

Deep down below the surface of the lake may be seen what appears to be the charred and blackened trunks of large trees. They stand upright in the water, but have neither root nor branch and never rise to the surface nor sink to the bottom. The lake has no outlet and the volume of water in it is the same all the time.

A strange fatality attaches to this lake. Once it was the favorite resort of the boys of the neighborhood for bathing and swimming, but now they never go near it. Fifteen boys have been drowned in its waters in twice as many years. A few of the bodies were recovered, but those who were drowned any distance from the banks sunk to the bottom and were never brought to the surface.

The depth of the lake has never been ascertained. Soundings to a depth of seven hundred feet found no bottom, and the people in the vicinity say the lake has none. The Indian legend of the origin of the lake is that before the white man came to this country two tribes became involved in a war, and after a number of bloody battles the smaller tribe was almost exterminated. Then the old men and chiefs of the weak tribe sued for peace and arranged for a council. While the pipe was being passed around a signal was given and the chiefs of the strong tribe suddenly sprang up with drawn tomahawks and murdered every one of the chiefs of the smaller tribe.

Then the war was renewed and carried on until the weak tribe was exterminated. A few moons after the massacre of the chiefs a fire broke out in the pine forest where the massacre occurred. The fire burned in this spot for eight moons and the ground sunk down out of sight; the fire disappeared, and in its stead appeared a lake. The Indians gave the lake a name which means "lake of death."

WON THE BIG PRIZE.

A Book-Keeper's Sad Experience with a Horse and Wagon.

It is not often that winning a prize will make a man look sad, but the unlikely frequently happens, says the Chicago Globe. The other morning the book-keeper in one of the wholesale establishments of the city went to his desk looking so blue that his fellow clerks thought he must have lost some of his relatives during the night. They delicately inquired what the trouble was, and were somewhat abashed at the response:

"Oh, it is all my cursed luck," he exclaimed. "I never knew such an unfortunate fellow as I am."

"Why, you have not been toying with the tiger and gone dead broke?" they asked, still more interested.

"Well, not exactly," he replied. "The fact is, I bought a ticket for a raffle, and won a horse and wagon."

"But what is there in that to make you look blue?" they asked, in astonishment.

"Well, I will tell you. It is just this way. I was acquainted with an old expressman—had known him for forty years, in fact. He had an old horse and wagon that he drove all that time. Like their owner they were pretty well worn out. Well, the old man sickened and died, and his friends determined to raffle the horse and wagon in order to get enough to bury him decently. Of course I had to buy a ticket, and would you believe it, I won! Now, what I am to do with that horse and wagon is what bothers me. They are a perfect white elephant on my hands. Nobody would buy them from me. I can not take them and leave them on the street, and I can not let the poor old brute of a horse die of starvation. He will eat his head off in less than no time, and yet what can I do? I will give anybody five dollars who will relieve me of my prize and call it square."

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW,

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the Hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

AN ACT OF HUMANITY.

How Bishop Beckwith Obtained Decent Burial for a Spy.

[illegible] Some Deeds of a Clergyman Who Knew Neither Fear Nor Prejudice—How He Tried to Save the Life of a Northern Soldier.

Bishop Beckwith was one of the men who knew no fear, says the Atlanta Constitution, and during all the years he served as chaplain on General Polk's staff he was never known to swerve from the path which he considered duty marked out for him. A striking example of the determination of his character was given toward the close of the war, when, in defiance of the findings of a court-martial and in opposition to the sentiment of the entire army, he used every effort to save the life of a spy.

It was during the last year of the Confederacy that a man was found loitering about General Polk's headquarters. He was unable to answer the questions put to him satisfactorily, and, as his whole bearing proclaimed him a Northerner, immediately it was said: "This man is a spy. Let him be hanged."

A drum-head court-martial listened to the testimony, and as the prisoner could only bring forward his unsupported assertion that he was innocent he was quickly sentenced to be hanged.

It was while the prisoner was waiting to be executed that Bishop Beckwith heard of the case and hurried to offer what consolation he could. Something in the story he was told by the condemned man convinced the chaplain that there was some truth in the story he had listened to, and by the exercise of his wonderful eloquence he procured a new trial.

The accused man's unsupported testimony was, however, not sufficient to convince a court composed of stern soldiers as it had the man of God, and he was again found guilty and sentenced to be hanged the next day.

All the intervening hours the Bishop passed preparing the condemned spy for the dreadful ordeal through which he was to pass, and he even consented to go as far as the gallows with the man he had tried to save, though he could not bring himself to promise that he would stand by and see the execution performed.

In the gray light of the breaking day a dismal procession took its way to the borders of the camp. In the midst of the soldiers marched a man with his arms pinioned behind him and by his side was the friend he had found in the midst of his enemies, striving to comfort the doomed man in that hour of his sore trial.

Not until the rope was around his neck did the clergyman turn away, so as to avoid seeing the death struggle, and as soon as it was over he hurried back to render the last services possible and see that Christian burial was given the lifeless clay.

About the foot of the gallows the soldiers stood looking at the swaying body. There was no pity in their hearts for the life cut off in its prime, and when the chaplain asked them to cut down the body and place it in the rude coffin which had been prepared, they all turned away, saying: "He was a spy; let him hang there till he rots."

When the chaplain found all his entreaties useless he advanced with a knife and quietly but with determination commenced cutting down the body.

Every man there had received some kindness from the clergyman, and they all loved him well. When they saw that he was in earnest reluctantly they lent their aid, and in a few moments the body was lying on the grass.

Under the same force of example the soldiers even consented to place the corpse in the coffin, but dig a grave for a convicted spy was asking too much of them, and they refused absolutely to even make a beginning.

Without a word of upbraiding or complaint Chaplain Beckwith procured a spade and commenced digging. One by one the hearts of the men softened at the sight of their brave pastor performing, for duty's sake, such an unusual task, and soon a big soldier who had been earnest in his assertion that the "spy should be left for the buzzards to feed on," took the spade from his hands and continued the work.

When the coffin was finally lowered Chaplain Beckwith read the Christian burial service, and saw to it that a wooden cross was placed at the head of the mound.

After the war news of the manner by which the spy received the last offices of the church was carried North and finally reached the dead man's family. Their gratitude has never abated, and even now the Bishop of Georgia frequently receives letters from a distant New England home bearing ever-renewed thanks for the kindness shown the enemy of his country while he lived, and the determination he displayed in burying him after he was executed.

FIVE DAYS ON A RAFT.

A Vessel Wrecked at Sea—Terrible Suffering of Survivors.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Tribune says: The steamship Orinoc, of the Quebec Steamship Company, is noted in shipping circles for the number of shipwrecked crews she brings into port. Yesterday she arrived from the Bermudas with the captain and crew of the brigantine Abbie Clifford, which was lost in a hurricane. The men lived five days on a raft, with no water or food except a few raisins. The aged captain on the first night of the hurricane, before his ship had gone down, saw his wife torn by a giant wave from the rigging, where he had lashed her, and washed overboard. The people on the raft were finally rescued by a ship which had been disabled in the same hurricane, and they were taken to St. George, Bermuda.

The storm struck the ship August 30. When the storm was at its height the mast went overboard, leaving the Abbie Clifford helpless. It was impossible to move about, and the captain and crew, which numbered [illegible], were obliged to be satisfied with getting such shelter and protection from the waves as was offered by the sails. On three different occasions the captain and wife were washed overboard into the sea, and each time a second wave picked them up and threw them back to the ship's deck.

Just before the ship went to pieces Captain Stover started to crawl along the deck toward the forward part, where his presence was needed among the men. Hardly had he started when he heard above the roar of the storm a cry for help. Looking back he saw his wife go over the ship's side in a big wave and a moment later she was struggling in the waves, far astern. Nothing could be done to aid her, as the sea was so violent no boat could live in it, and Mrs. Stover was far away to be reached by ropes.

When it seemed impossible for the ship to hold together for another hour, the men built a raft of loose pieces of spars and wreckage and took refuge on this, where they suffered intensely for five days. On September 4, when hope had been all but abandoned, the men on the raft sighted a sail and soon were rescued.

MOTHER JACKSON'S WIT.

How She Got a Day's Work Out of a Pie-loving Cormorant.

In the long ago there lived in Sunday River valley a woman by the name of Jackson, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal. She was better known as Mother Jackson by the settlers of the valley.

Jackson's people invited the neighbors to help them husk their corn on a certain night, saying that they should have a good supper and all the pumpkin pie they could eat.

One Dudley Foster told her he would come, but if he did not have all the pumpkin pie he could eat she must pay him for a day's work.

"Well," said Mother Jackson, "Dudley, how many pies can you eat?"

"I can eat five pies, any way."

"Now, Dudley," she said, "you can not eat one pie. If you don't eat one pie for your supper you shall give me a day's work. If you eat all of one pie I will pay you for a day's work."

"Done," said Dudley. "I will take that bargain."

The husking came off at the time appointed, with all the fun of such gatherings. Dudley called for his pie. Mother Jackson had made one for him. She had baked it on a platter as large as she could get into the old stove oven. It was several inches in thickness and about as large as a linen-wheel rim. She brought out the pie and placed it before Dudley, telling him to eat all he could. If he ate it all she would pay him for a day's work; if he failed he must give her a day's work.

Dudley thought he could eat the whole of the pie and went at it. He actually ate three-fourths of the pie, but had to give it up as a bad job, and, as the Norway Advertiser tells the tale, had to do the day's work according to the bargain.

NOVEL LIFE-PRESERVER.

A Man's Health Restored by a Reduction of His Salary.

"My life was saved by having my salary reduced," said a robust, middle-aged man to a Philadelphia Call reporter.

The remark naturally excited surprise.

"Yes," continued the man, "that was what saved me. I was assistant bookkeeper for a wholesale house and was earning $1,200 a year. Something happened, no matter what, and I was thrown out. I was idle for two months and then went to work for $750.

"At that time I was thin and weak, and couldn't walk a mile to save a dollar. At any rate, I thought I couldn't. But when my income was so fearfully reduced I found it absolutely necessary to economize, and I did so by walking home from my work, a distance of about five miles.

"It pretty nearly killed me at first. Then I began to enjoy it. Within three months I was walking both ways, and I've kept it up ever since: Ten miles a day, summer and winter, unless during a hard storm, and look at me! One hundred and eighty pounds, the appetite of an ostrich, and not a day's sickness in ten years.

"You see, gentlemen, how it was that the cutting down of my salary saved my life."

The Growth of Names.

How names grow receives an odd illustration in the Congo country. White people are known in the upper Congo districts as Batendele. Tendele was as near as the Congo nature could get to the pronunciation of Stanley, "ba" being the common prefix for people. Batendele is the Congese for white people. In a somewhat similar way the Indians of the Northwest coast bestowed the title of Boston men on all white people, as ships from Boston were those most frequently seen by them in the old days when the Oregon coast was a howling wilderness.

Beautiful Women.

The magical efforts of Wisdom's Robertine as a beautifer, and preserver of the complexion have been attested by thousands of leading ladies of society and the stage. It is the only article ever discovered which gives a natural and beautiful tint to the complexion, removing tan, sunburn, freckles and all roughness of the face and arms, leaving the skin soft, smooth and velvety. All remarks on its delightfuly cooling and refreshing properties, a distinction not found in any other similar article known. D. E. Campbell, agent. *

Everybody's Graft.

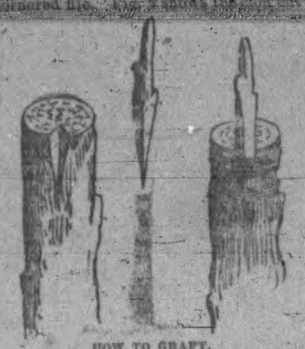
The method shone in the engraving is a convenient one for grafting stock that is too large for lap-grafting and too small for cleft-grafting. Fig. 1 shows the stock with the notch cut in as it would be if filled in with a three-cornered file. Fig. 2 shows the [illegible] to fit the notch. Fig. 3 shows the cion held in place by a cord wound about it and tied. All the exposed surface of the stock and cion should be covered with wax. By sliding the cion up or down a little in the notch a very close matching of the bark may be made. I have had as good results from using this method as any I have ever tried, and think less skill is required in getting a good joint.—Farm and Home.



HOW TO GRAFT.

A Danish Idea.

Denmark has organized a new system of State butter shows. The scheme includes a continuous butter show at the expense of the State during several months in each year, where fresh samples of butter will be received every fourteen days, the judges' decision to be given on the butter as received, and its condition at the end of fourteen days. The samples are to be sent immediately on the receipt of a letter or telegram, so that the dairymen will not be able to make a special cask for exhibition, and the samples are to be repeated as often as required. Competing dairies must send in a return of the feeding and system generally followed on the farm, with special reference to the week during which the samples are sent in. At present the number of dairies entered is three hundred and sixty. Nine judges have been selected, and these act in groups of three each, each group recording an independent opinion on each sample, which is checked by those of the other two groups. Each group will consist of two butter merchants and one dairy expert. The exhibitors are paid the usual market rate for their exhibits. The shows will be held at intervals of a fortnight during eight months of the year.—Country Gentleman.

ASSININE STUPIDITY.

The flat refusal of the Minister of Fisheries to permit wrecker WHITELAW to carry on the business of whaling in the Gulf of Georgia is characteristic, which is to say, assinine. The whales of the Gulf of Georgia are neither ornamental nor useful. Tourists take but a languid glance at the miniature leviathans, as they disport themselves miles away from the steamer, while as to their usefulness running at large, that we imagine would puzzle a naturalist to determine, let alone a cabinet minister. The flat refusal of the whaling privilege is another case of that spirit which sent up the tariff ten per cent., and which hectored and even harried American cod fishermen. It is an outcropping of the insolence of Toryism, and which is reciprocated by robust Republicans like REED, FRYE and HALE, to the effect that in the matter of reciprocity Canada need not apply. There, is, however, another phase of the question, which is that British Columbia is but a fief to Ottawa; that whatever may be British Columbia's ideas of development they are made contingent on the royal will of a ministerial bigot We do not know that the British Columbia Government would have given Mr. WHITELAW the privilege of whaling in the Gulf of Georgia had it the power, but that does not alter the principle that British Columbia should have control of the denizens of her own waters. If British Columbia is not fit to administrate in such matters, who is? The fish commissioner sent out here to enquire into the grievances of the Fraser river canners is reported to have said that he can't find any, couching his language in a manner that would leave the impression that the canners themselves did not know what they wanted. This is perfectly comprehensible. The only problem that Ottawa has ever been able to grasp perfectly is that of bribing constituencies. The whales in the Gulf of Georgia are lucky in having friends at Ottawa, but as for British Columbia, well, one of these days, perhaps, she will shake off these old men of the sea.

"BRITAIN FIN DE SIECLE."

FREDERICK GREENWOOD, discussing social restlessness under the above title in the Contemporary Review, thus expresses himself in regard to the perpetuity of monarchy in England. He assumes first that existing toleration of monarchy in England is owing to the fact that it is represented by a woman, and pursuing this line of reasoning its perpetuity must depend on like cause. Says Mr. GREENWOOD: "Ministerial Government will become far more difficult when a king sits on the throne. The simple explanation of that remark is, kings are men, and therefore are targets for many a shaft of questioning suspicion and damaging inuendo that cannot be aimed at an equally blameless woman. The assumption when a queen reigns is, that the sovereign trusts her councillors; when a king reigns, that a sovereign has a will of his own, preferences, favoritisms, and pulls the wires even though his hand is never seen in the direction of public affairs.

Many considerations drawn from the evolutionary changes that have appeared of late in the institutions of the country favor the opinion; but on these accounts alone, the most fortunate thing for monarchy in England—which is the very prop and centre of stability for the whole empire—would be succession in the female line. Under the best of kings it will probably be no more safe from assault in the p[illegible]ate feature than the House of Lor[illegible] is now. Under a changed order [illegible]on, which I need not be told [illegible] impossible, the monarchy would go [illegible]ly on as long as the country could reckon upon as much careful good sense, as much sweetness, kindness, and honor in its Queen as may be found in thousands of English homes. Concluding his extraordinary article, he delivers this blow at the politicians: "The social anarchism, the loosening of State control, the continued and permitted success of robbery associations, the confusion of parties, the paralysis of Parliament, the competition of statesmen in the bribery of lawlessness—there is enough of all this at present; and who can doubt that the causes that brought this state of things into existence will become more active when the next general elections are decided, and thereafter. The country is sound enough, but like every great community, it has its corruptible elements, and these it has been the business of politicians to pander to for years past. The people did not teach them to traffic with disorder, to compound with lawlessness. If parliamentary government is going to pieces, it is the work of the politicians alone; and if the country is unprepared for a time of trial which no other great nation hopes to escape, their's is the blame. Still more will they be to blame if, while continental ambitions are gathering to a head, England should sink yet farther into political anarchy. The consequence of that state of things might be very grave, indeed."

WHAT DOES ORGANIZATION MEAN?

CHAUNCEY DEPEW addressed a New York State Fair recently, and discussing agricultural depression attributed it largely to the attempts of speculators to corner the markets. To meet this he advised the farmers to organize. "Capital," he said, "organizes, labor and manufacturers. The farmers alone have failed to unite in any efficient way." To this the San Francisco Chronicle responds that "no one who has watched the signs of the times can fail to have been struck with the present tendency of capital to organize and combine for two purposes—first, for self-protection, and secondly, for profit. The advantage of accumulated capital is chiefly in the reduction of administrative expenses. The same staff of men can handle the interests of $50,000,000 of capital as well as of $5,000,000, or can manage six thousand miles of railroad just as well as six hundred. In addition to this, there is a direct gain in unity, since it reconciles interests which would otherwise clash, and prevents that competition which is often spoken of as 'cutting each others' throats.'

"The same general principles apply to organized labor, which is the correlative of organized capital. One stands on just the same footing as the other, and the arguments in favor of one apply equally to the other."

It would appear that despite the critics we are drifting toward a modified form of Bellamyism. When every industry shall have become organized, we shall have "Looking Backward" in everything but name.

THE PLANET MARS.

Mr. FLAINMARION, the eminent astronomer, has been studying the planet Mars to the following effect:—"It seems that at certain seasons of the year the oceans of the planet Mars are divided into two parts, just as if a gigantic bridge or bank of sand had been thrown across them from one shore to the other. For instance, there is, among other seas in the planet Mars one situated at the 90th degree longitude east of the meridian 0.25 degrees longitude on the theastral tropic. On account of the isolation as well as the superficial area, the sea resembles our Black Sea. Hitherto this sea has always been observed as uniform and nearly circular, but last June M. SCHIAPARELLI, of the Milan observatory, discovered that this sea was cut in two by a yellow band, which divides it into unequal parts. A lake, somewhat similar to our Lake Tschad, was also noticed to have been divided into two parts at the same time. An excellent and very minute observer in England discovered that five immense canals were also divided into two parts by two straight lines absolutely parallel to each other, in the same manner that a certain number of enigmatic canals were noticed to have been divided some years ago. What can these seas, lakes, canals, that divide themselves up in this manner, be? As inhabitants of this earth we have only our observatories and our terrestrial ideas in our mind. These are insufficient to divine what takes place in another world, but such discoveries are none the less worthy of all our attention.

HOME RULE.

The tone of public opinion, as we expected it would be, questions the wisdom of the arrest of Messrs. DILLON and O'BRIEN. Blatant as DILLON and O'BRIEN may have been, it should occur to any but a Tory Government that the gagging of these men can avail nothing. Whatever may be said of the Irish question it represents a principle. The principle may be wrong; but it is bound ultimately to go into effect. We have never been able to understand why Ireland should not have home rule. The opponents of it urge that it is superfluous. Nothing is superfluous that a people want. If every man in Ireland wanted to hang himself there should be no impediments put in his way. Home rule for Ireland under certain restrictions could not possibly harm the British Empire, and would at the same time relieve the Imperial Parliament of an endless amount of trouble. If quietude in English politics can be secured by granting the Irish home rule there should not be a moment's delay. And we may suppose that only the landlord influence would be granted. Downing street as at present constituted, is but a continuation of Threadneedle street, but this question of home rule has come to be a vital principle which is bound to pass out from under the control of vested interests. It may be a mistake that vested interests should no longer control things, but the fact that home rule is in operation in the United States and Canada leaves no excuse for its being denied to Ireland. The philosophy of home rule is so deep rooted among English speaking people, that the Irish home rulers command almost universal sympathy, not on account of ill will toward England, but because home rule is the question of the hour.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The American missionaries in Japan are doing grand work, according to the University Magazine. They are introducing the game of base ball with remarkable success, which, says the Springfield Republican, augurs well for the growth of the Christian virtues in the Celestial. ARTEMUS WARD would label this comment "sarkasm."

The trouble in the Swiss canton of Ticino is purely local in its nature. The canton lies on the Italian border, and its people speak Italian and are almost entirely Roman Catholic. For a number of years the Clericals have had control of the local government, and the present revolt has its origin in popular disgust at their administration. It is charged against them that they have maintained themselves in power by electoral frauds, and the people are now endeavoring to oust them by force.

Germans without money or skill in any craft are crowding into East Africa, especially into Zanzibar, to such a degree that great destitution and distress is imminent. The usual results of an over supply of labor are experienced in falling of wages and increase of living expenses. If Germany had not her standing army to sustain, most of these emigrants would rather stay at home; as it is they only change the place of their misery. It may be added that if the Russian autocracy were destroyed and its greed with it, the disarmament that BISMARCK says he wants to see might begin, and this country, as well as the countries of Europe, would have cause to rejoice heartily. Russia is the storm cloud that hangs over Europe.

BOULANGER has not only fallen so low that none are so poor as to do him reverence, but he has fallen so low that he does not undertake to defend himself against his enemies. Of course there is this phase of the matter to be borne in mind; situated as he is he can only defend himself with a verbal denial of charges that may be made, and these certainly would not be entitled to much weight. BOULANGER without doubt is as black as he painted, and further revelations are expected, as the disgraceful controversies between his late supporters continue. The career of this man has been a bitter lesson to France, and a good one. For its ridiculous failure has rid the republic of a host of enemies who were attacking her from within and without.

It will not do now, says the Montreal Witness, to contrast a slovenly line soldier with a "lubberly marine." There is not the faintest trace of the old sea dogs on Prince GEORGE'S boats. The heavy, rolling gait, the aimlessness of direction, and the general recklessness of demeanor of thirty years ago have given place to a directness and set up carriage suggestive of military training rather than of the old-fashioned son of Neptune. The men on the ships then were the queerest medley of all races, gathered not so much for their intelligence as to afford man power to do by main strength what is now necessarily done by steam. To-day intelligence takes the place of numbers, and one man can do now what it took five to do then. Better still, there is in the appearance of the men a sobriety and dignity which the old sea dog certainly did not exhibit outwardly. But how about their fighting qualities.

"It's pretty damp for a person with the rheumatism to be prowling around, Uncle Josh."

"Mebbe, boss, but it's the doctor's advice."

"Do you mean to tell me the doctor advised you to be out nights?"

"Not jestly dat way—but he said I must have chicken brof."—Life.

THE BENWELL MURDER.

BIRCHELL ON TRIAL—HE PLEADS "NOT GUILTY."

As Cool as Ever—Witnesses Examined by the Crown—Light on the Farm Pupil System—Pelley's Evidence—Incidents of the Famous Crime.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 22.—An immense crowd filled the court room when the case of John Reginald Birchell, charged with the murder of Frederick Benwell, was called in the Oxford Assizes this morning. The case, the first on the docket, possesses a peculiar interest hardly outrivalled in the criminal history of Canada, on account, principally, of the part that circumstantial evidence is to play in it. The details of the killing of Benwell in a swamp near the village of Princeton in February last are still fresh in the minds of the public. Birchell faced the judge, and pleaded "Not Guilty" to the indictment; his bearing is the acme of coolness and self-possession.

Counsel for the crown finished his presentation of the case against Birchell at three o'clock, and immediately called William Macdonald as the first witness. Macdonald said that he became acquainted with Birchell when the latter came to him as a farm pupil from England. Birchell was then known as F. A. Somerset. He stopped at Macdonald's farm one day, then went to Woodstock, saying that he was not brought up to such work. Macdonald's evidence threw considerable new light on the pupil farming business. He admitted that he was agent at Woodstock for Ford, Rathbun & Co. England, who sent pupils to place on farms, the farmer getting $125 bonus and agents $35; the farmer receiving half the amount at the end of the first month that the pupil was satisfied, and the balance at the end of six months. Macdonald said he first knew Neville H. Pickthall when the latter came out here as a farm pupil five or six years ago, and he saw him last on Sunday in Woodstock. The names of the pupils placed by Macdonald were given by him as James Young, Hartlock Woodhouse, Wheeler Long, Pardo E. Dudley and F. A. Somerset. Witness said Dudley was placed by him on Pickthall's farm but stayed one month only, and the $125 bonus was paid just the same, half going to Dudley, who went to Detroit, Mich., committed a robbery and fled to Niagara Falls. Macdonald contradicted himself a good deal, and was given a crucial cross-examination by Blackstock, counsel for the defence. He admitted that Ford, Rathbun & Co. wrote that Birchell complained that Macdonald was swindling English farm pupils. He said that Birchell borrowed from him considerable money and repaid all but $30.

Douglass Raymond Pelley, a young Englishman, who accompanied the Birchell-Benwell party to this country, followed. He told of his arrangements with Birchell to enter into a farming partnership in Canada; said that Birchell told him he had a farm near Niagara Falls of two hundred acres, lived in good English style, kept English servants, had a good brick house, and had one of his stables lighted by electricity. He was also speaking of his overseer as a man named Macdonald, and two brothers named Peacock, who worked on the farm. MacDonald, the previous witness, said that the Peacocks are myths. Birchell claimed to be a farm pupil, and succeeding so well that he bought out the farm. Witness first met Benwell at Liverpool. Birchell said that Benwell was a nuisance; that he was taking him out as a favor to Benwell's father, and that he would put him on some farm and get rid of him. Benwell changed 10 or 25 sovereigns in New York. The trip of Birchell and Benwell from Buffalo on the day of the murder, and Birchell's reappearance alone that night were told. Birchell said Benwell did not understand farming, and sent him two or three other addresses because he had received so much money. His heavy boots were very muddy. Birchell avoided taking Pelley to the farm, giving various reasons. Pelley finally taxed him with false pretenses, and got an answer that Birchell expected a draft from England, and would start farming in a week. Pelley's wild goose chase to New York after Benwell, while Mr. and Mrs. Birchell identified Benwell's body was then described. Pelley saw Birchell's pistol, a small one. He identified the clothes of Birchell and Benwell produced in evidence. Pelley's examination will be resumed to-morrow. Mrs. Birchell was not in court to-day.

NEWS FROM THE NORTH.

The Salmon Pack Good—A Buffalo Gets Ill's Deserts.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—The bark Will W. Case has arrived, 27 days from Mushagak, Alaska, with 16,000 cases and 1416 barrels of salmon. The cargo of 11,858 cases and 310 barrels of salmon brought down on Saturday evening by the steamer Bertha from Karluk, Alaska, was much larger than expected. One of the gentlemen who is interested in one of the canneries at Karluk stated yesterday that while the run of fish in other parts of Alaska had been so very light this year that some of the canneries were doing nothing at all, at Karluk the run had been heavy, and at least 25,000 more cases will be packed than was expected at the beginning of the season.

The steamer Bertha brings details of the killing of Geo. Hemmenway at Unga Island by an old man named Clarke. Clarke is a feeble man, 70 years of age, and Hemmenway was agent of the Alaska Commercial Co. at Unga Island. About three years ago Clarke sold Hemmenway a quantity of furs for which he received no money, but a note for $600. From time to time Clarke asked for his money, only to be laughed at. Hemmenway gradually became enraged at being asked for money, and finally declared that he didn't owe Clarke a dollar and that the note was a forgery. On the day of the shooting Hemmenway was aboard the steamer leaving the island and was asked once more by Clarke for the money due on the note. At this request Hemmenway drew a pistol and threatened to kill Clarke on the spot. The old man hurriedly left and betook himself to his own house for safety. Immediately afterward Hemmenway with his companions jewed to the residence of the old man and arriving there drew his revolver cocked it and swearing he would kill old man on sight. Clarke took down a shot gun from its rack at the side of the house and immediately shot Hemmenway who fell dead in the doorway. The people of Unga Island hold Clarke blameless for killing him.

A NEW CATHEDRAL.

Christ Church Congregation Getting to Work—Considerable Money Raised.

The question of a new stone cathedral on the site now occupied by the wooden edifice on Church Hill has been one which for some time has engaged the attention of the members of the Church of England, and last evening a largely attended meeting was held in the church school room with the Rev. Lord Bishop in the chair. Prayer having been offered by Venerable Archdeacon Scriven, Mr. T. R. Smith read the minutes of the meeting held on the 11th inst. by the Church committee.

His Lordship the Bishop then explained the object of the present meeting. It was to make a move toward the erection of a stone structure befitting the site and the city, and one which would accommodate the increasing congregation. It had been shown that it was not feasible to try and enlarge the present structure, and there was nothing to prevent a new cathedral being built. Although it was an important work it was one easily done when the extent and generosity of the congregation was considered. In other places part of the building had been built first, and then the remainder gone on with by degrees. The same could be done here. The chancel could first be erected and the remainder would soon be completed. He did not think the work would be such a great one after all, and believed that the proposed structure would be built in less time than similar ones have been in the older countries.

Mr. Justice Crease then moved the following resolution: "That in the opinion of this meeting the time has arrived when the requirements of Victoria, and the diocese generally, are such that it is desirable a stone cathedral should be built." This was carried unanimously. In speaking to the motion, Mr. Crease said that a stone building had been decided on by the committee. Such a building would carry with it a sense of high architecture, and could not be completed for less than $150,000. It would require earnest work and some personal sacrifice, but he had no doubt but what the work would be done.

Major Dupont had much pleasure in seconding the resolution, spoke of the need of going to work at once. The chancel could be gone on with. The Church of England was not the weakest, and if all worked together the Cathedral would soon be complete.

Mr. T. R. Smith also spoke of the fact that applications for fifty sittings in the present cathedral which it had been impossible to supply, had lately been made. It was very necessary to build a larger edifice, not only to accommodate the growing congregation but to remove an unfavorable contrast with other religious bodies. The site was a most prominent one and should be surmounted by a stone structure.

Sir Joseph Trutch hoped that something practical would result from the meeting. The appointment of a committee was necessary, and he would move that the following gentlemen be appointed the general committee to carry into effect the first resolution passed, with power to add to their number; the functions of the committee being to appoint sub-committees, solicit subscriptions, obtain subscriptions and plans, let contracts, and generally to carry out the foregoing resolution: The Bishop of Columbia, Hon Sir M Begbie, Sir Joseph Trutch, Justice Crease, Justice Drake, Major Dupont, Ven Archdeacon Scriven, Rev A Beanlands, Rev H Kingham, J Trutch, W C Ward, R Ward, T R Smith, J T Jones, Hon W Hamley, Hon R Beaven, T B Hall, L B Hamlin, M W Waitt, Hon P O'Reilly, R E Jackson, L Crease, B Drake, Dr. Hanington, Judge Harrison, Hon Justice Walkem, W T Drake, Roul Harvey, S Wootten, W M Chudley, Hon. A. N. Richards, R Hett, C Wilson, H E Croasdaile, H Kent, Hon J H Turner, M P P, A Dumbleton, H Croft, M P P, R Finlayson, G A Keefer, J A Graham, E C Baker, Dr Powell, W Crave, J Ward, R Lettice, J Hawkins, — Claxton, P Woolly, Dr Newcombe, J J Austin, T Davie, Major Peters, T C Sorby.

Ven. Archdeacon Scriven, in seconding, said it was a pleasure to see many members of other congregations on the list. This was not to be a parish church, but a cathedral which all won'd have an interest in. He believed there were many present who would take part in the dedication of the proposed building.

Some discussion then took place, and some additions and changes were made to the original resolution, which was carried.

On motion of Mr. Robert Ward, seconded by Dr. Hanington, Rev. A. Beanlands was appointed clerical secretary to act with Messrs. Thomas A. Smith and Dudley Crease as lay secretaries.

The merits of the gentleman secretaries were mentioned by Mr. Ward and Dr. Hanington. The latter also alluded to the rapid work made by the Methodists in raising money for their new church, and hoped to see the Church of England Cathedral complete in less than three years.

Rev. Mr. Beanlands said that if 300 families each gave $100 per annum, the cathedral would be paid for in five years.

On motion of Mr. Croft, Sir Joseph Trutch was appointed honorary treasurer, and, a subscription list being opened over $20,600 was raised at the meeting.

It being arranged for the committee to meet at the school room on the evening of the 29th, the meeting adjourned.

The new steamer Thistle has her engines tried alongside the wharf. Everything works well, the boiler giving plenty of steam and the engines working smoothly. She will be taken for an official trial trip in a few days.

Among the sports that took place at Nanaimo on Saturday was a tug of war between the sailors of the Seaman's Coast Union and the citizens. The former won the prize of $20 which they kindly donated to the locked out Wellington miners.

The delightful thirst-quenching "Montserrat" Lime-Fruit Juice is an admirable and wholesome hot weather beverage.

A handsome banner which was borne by the High School boys in the labor procession at Nanaimo on Saturday was made for the school fifteen years ago and beyond being a little faded is as good as the day it was first made.

The meeting of the British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association, which was to have been held at Chilliwhack on Thursday, was postponed until further notice. A sufficient number of members did not turn up to make the meeting the desired success, it was considered best to postpone it until a future date. A meeting will probably be held in Westminster during the exhibition.

POWDERLY ON DEPEW.

The Silver-Tongued Chauncey Depew Proves a Back Number.

Powderly at a recent public meeting discussed Depew, and Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, as follows:

"I hold in my hand a most readable volume, entitled the 'After-Dinner Speeches and Orations of Chauncey M. Depew.' One would imagine from this volume that Mr. Depew was not a back number, but since he says he is I suppose I must believe it. Here is a speech dated 'Chicago, Feb. 22, 1888,' in which Chauncey says that trades unions are debating clubs of the best sort, and that a session of the Knights of Labor is a congress of labor. But he has changed his mind since then, and now he isn't saying anything. He has passed the telephone over to Third Vice-President Wendt to listen to the jingling of the $200,000,000 moneybag at Newport, and give out a public report of that jingling. Of course Mr. Depew used to be different; I have the proof of it right here in this volume. I am sorry that he has become a back number, it is on record that once, before H. Walter Webb succeeded him, that he made a speech regarding the wrongs and rights of working girls, in which he said that it was outrageous that any of them should be discharged without cause, and added: 'But when avarice gets possession of a man, that moment humanity and the rights of others are forgotten.' I also find in this volume the silver-tongued Chauncey talking about Jefferson and the preserving of the privileges of caste. But that, too, was before he met Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, at a public banquet in New Haven, and decided with Mr. Arthur that it was preposterous that locomotive engineers at $4 a day should have anything to do with the grievances of mere dollar-a-day workingmen. The pulverizing of class privileges and distinctions hasn't seemed so good a thing to Chauncey since then."

SPANKED BY HIS WIFE.

A Warning to Husbands Who May Be Married to Muscular Women.

A curious story is told at the capitol at the expense of a member of Congress, who, while of no small caliber intellectually, has not been blessed with an abundance of avoirdupois, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. He has a wife who is much taller than he is and who is also well-known to her children as a strict disciplinarian. One evening, so the story goes, she heard a noise in the nursery after bed-time. She promptly seized her slipper and started for the scene of the uproar. Just as she reached the door the children extinguished the light. Stretching out her hand she captured one of the boys and to judge from the outcries he made the spanking was thoroughly effective. But the mother was somewhat surprised at the conduct of the second sufferer. Instead of sobbing, he yelled protestations in a strong voice and at last swore roundly. The mother, astonished, jumped up, and, letting him fall from her knee to the floor exclaimed, tenderly:

"Is that you, hubby?"

Overwhelmed with confusion, he admitted that it was her "hubby" she had been spanking. After they had retired amid the muffled laughter of the children, who were trying to restrain it by stuffing pillows into their mouths, explanations followed. He too had heard the noise and with the same object in view as his wife, had gone to the nursery, where he had been caught by his spouse.

Hereafter he vows that he will allow his wife to discipline his children unaided.

"Have you a typewriter?"

"Yes."

"What kind?"

"Red-haired and freckled. They do better work than Racamier blondes."—New York Herald.

HEADWATERS OF THE YUKON AND MACKENZIE

Explored—The Alaska Boundary Marked—Yukon Gold Fields Are on British Soil—The Timid Indians—Giant Caribou Trample the Moss.

From the New York Sun.

Every energetic and intrepid explorer who penetrates Africa and does good work in the vast and little-known countries of the Dark Continent is certain to see his name heralded through the civilized world when he comes home. Unfortunately there are less conspicuous parts of the world where equal merit, enterprise, and self-sacrifice receive at the hands of the public an equal measure of appreciation.

This is particularly true of our own continent, where much exploratory work still remains to be done. How many of the readers of the Sun have ever heard of Mr. William Ogilvie of the Canadian land survey? Very likely not one in a hundred, and yet over a year and a half has elaped since his return to Ottawa from the most noteworthy travels that have been made in a long time in North America. The modest traveler, who describes his adventures in the most unpretentious language, is really entitled to rank among the best explorers of the century. He was absent from civilization nearly two years, during which he made instrumental and track surveys, covering a distance of 2,700 miles, in a wild and almost unexplored country, some portions of which it is certain were never visited by a white man before.

Landing from the Pacific steamer at Chilkoot, on the coast of Alaska, in May, 1887, his exploratory surveys were pushed for hundreds of miles down the Lewes-Yukon river, then up the Tat-on-duc, Porcupine, Bell, Trout and Peel rivers to the Mackenzie, and finally up the Mackenzie basin, along the great system of lakes and tributaries, until he reached Ottawa again in January last year. The report of his long wanderings has recently been published by the Canadian department of the interior, and from that report this brief account of them is taken.

Most of our information, with regard to the great regions through which Ogilvie wandered, was derived from the agents of the Hudson Bay Co., who explored the rivers and crossed mountain regions, establishing here and there trading posts where they might buy furs collected by Indians. Some very interesting facts are connected with the names we see upon the maps. In the Lewes river, for instance, which with the Pelly forms the head streams of the Yukon, we see an expansion of the stream which is called Lake Labarge. It was named for Mike Labarge, who, in 1867 was sent by the Western Union Telegraph Company to explore a route through British Columbia and Alaska for the purpose of stringing a telegraph line over the continent and across Behring strait to Asia, and thence to Europe. He had nearly reached this lake when word that had been sent hundreds of miles, came to him that the Atlantic cable had been successfully laid, and the company had therefore abandoned its scheme. The company thereupon in great haste sent for Labarge and its other agents to recall them from their explorations.

On the Pelly river Mr. Ogilvie found the chimneys still standing of the station built by Campbell over forty years ago, when he discovered that the Pelly river was identical with the Yukon, and built the post from which he was finally driven by hostile Indians. The Porcupine, Bell and several other rivers near or north of the Arctic circle, and explored by Ogilvie, were named by Mr. Bell, another famous agent of the Hudson Bay Company; but these discoveries made so long ago were not scientific explorations, and it was the task of Ogilvie to make the maps as accurate as possible of all the regions between which he traveled. He ascertained the altitudes of rivers and mountains, traced the directions of the hills and mountain ranges, off-shoots of the Rockies, and made some discoveries that have never appeared on any map. He found, for instance, a pass leading from tidewater in Chilkoot inlet to the navigable portion of the Lewes-Yukon river, along which it will be comparatively easy to build a wagon road or a railway, thus connecting the upper waters of the great Yukon directly with the sea. On his journey to the Mackenzie river he discovered a great stream, not marked on any map, over 300 miles long, which has been named the Ogilvie river. This stream falls over 3,000 feet in a distance of 180 miles, and the result is that the river is full of canyons, falls and rapids, and cannot be used for navigation. It is said that logs entering parts of the channel emerge below almost shivered into splinters by their conflict with the rocks and raging torrents.

One of the most interesting features of Ogilvie's work is his determination of the place where the Yukon river crosses the international boundary. On one side of the river he blazed the letter "A" on trees, and on the trees of the other side the letter "C," to denote that they were respectively in the territories of Alaska and Canada. There is reason to believe that this boundary line is practically accurate, but it will be interesting to learn if our own expedition, which is now surveying the boundary, will find that it crosses the river at the place where Ogilvie blazed the trees. This discovery of Ogilvie places the boundary some distance further west than it appears on any map. The result is that he declares that the gold mining territory along the Yukon to be on British soil, which was a great surprise to the miners, as they supposed they were in American territory. They knew all about the mining laws of the United States, but nothing of the regulations controlling mining in the Dominion, and they were therefore very anxious to learn from the explorer something about the Canadian mining laws.

The fact that this boundary has never before been determined has led to a number of interesting blunders, among which may be mentioned Fort Yukon, the post which the Hudson Bay Company established on what they supposed to be Canadian soil. But when the United States government discovered in 1869 that the company was occupying our own territory, the British trading enterprise was promptly notified to evacuate the post.

The most of Ogilvie's explorations were carried out in two basswood canoes, built extra strong, and weighing about 140 pounds each, so that two men could carry them without much difficulty. They carried Ogilvie and his heavy outfit over 2000 miles, going through some terrible rapids, which more than once threatened their destruction. Each canoe could hold two men and 1400 pounds of goods. When the explorer left them at Fort Chippewyan they were still in very good condition, and, with a little painting, he says, they could have made the same journey over again.

This speaks well for the value of basswood in canoe building, for among the dangers the party encountered were ice jams during the journeys of early spring which several times nearly crushed the canoes.

Some of the whites and the Indians whom the explorer met were so kind as to give him a great deal of assistance. It was very difficult to get even approximately exact statements from the miners along the Yukon. Many of them Ogilvie found to be inveterate jokers, who took a great delight in hoaxing everybody, and they sometimes spent hours in giving him information that was wholly contradicted by the next party he met. They were disposed to look upon every government agent like Ogilvie as a spy who had been sent into the country to see what they were doing, and if he found the country desirable for mining and other purposes they fully expected that he would make a report that would cause an undesirable influx of adventurers. Many of them were particularly averse to telling him anything about their mining operations. They thought they had a very good thing and they wanted to keep it to themselves. So Ogilvie had to sift the real facts about mining and other matters in that region out of a good many contradictory statements if he could not learn the truth by personal observation.

The Indians he met were generally a curious lot to deal with. While crossing the mountains to the Lewes river he found the Tagish tribe, who were in such mortal terror of the coast natives that he could hardly induce them to assist in packing his goods to the region in which they might come in contact with their enemies. They are, in fact, little more than slaves of the coast tribes, and are in constant dread of offending them. The natives a little inland would do nothing for white men unless they were sure of a large reward. They generally refuse to answer questions about the country, and he could get little information from them.

Far in the interior Ogilvie was constantly doing something that excited the suspicions of the natives, and he sometimes had trouble in establishing relations. On the Mackenzie river, when he picked up a telescope to look for a signal across the river, the Indians immediately turned and fled. Once, when they noticed a shotgun lying at his feet, they retreated to a distance, and it was some time before they consented to be friendly. When he was getting an observation once for azimuth and was looking for a star in the early evening, the Indians were very much awed as he pointed out the star. The sun had not yet set, and going away the Indians said they did not care to have anything to do with so mysterious a man. The most unintelligent natives he met were on the Lewes-Yukon, between the Tes-lin-too and Stewart rivers. None of the Indians in his party could understand anything his people said. They could not speak any language but their own. He tried by signs to get information about the river they were fishing on, but failed. He also tried to learn if there were other Indians in the neighborhood but they did not understand him. Their only anxiety was to have the strangers depart as soon as possible, and as nothing was to be made out of them, their wish was soon gratified.

Near the Porcupine river Ogilvie met a tribe who were in such fear of a people who were very likely mythical that they could not be induced to accompany the explorer. They had never seen anything to justify their fears, and knew nothing about their alleged enemies except the terrible things that some old men among them had heard when they were boys. They said their enemies were cannibals, who slept on the snow during the Arctic winter and ate their food raw. Not the slightest knowledge has been gained of any people, even remotely answering the description given by these timid Indians, and the probability is that they are simply the victims of false rumors originating many years ago. For a generation or two they have been scaring themselves with a bugaboo story. Of course, Ogilvie did not find any considerable population anywhere, though small tribes or families were scattered here and there throughout the entire scene of his wanderings.

In the mining region on the Yukon river, Ogilvie found only one firm doing business outside of gold mining. They are the Messrs. Harper & McQuestion, and it is evident that there is some opportunity for profitable commerce in that bleak and almost uninhabited region, from the fact that their business is said to amount in sales alone to $60,000 a year. They buy all sorts of furs from the Indians, who come long distances to their store. They supply the natives with many barter goods and import the large variety of articles used by the miners on the Yukon. Very valuable furs are found all through this region, and north of the Arctic circle Ogilvie found beaver, fox, lynx, ptarmigan and other beasts of prey and birds. Numberless caribou wander over the mossy slopes, living on the moss which they find under the snow. Indians do not appear to have hunted in the region northeast of the Yukon for many years, and the country is therefore comparatively rich in game.

Of a kiss at love's beginning," sings the poet, and his sentiment is true with one possible exception. If either party has the catarrh, even love's kiss loses its sweetness. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a sure cure for this repulsive and distressing affliction. By its mild, soothing, antiseptic cleansing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases. $500 reward offered for an incurable case.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

THE FIRST CONSIGNMENT.

A Cargo of Wheat for the Victoria Rice Mills.

Victoria will soon have within her limits one of the most important industries in the province—the Victoria Flour Mill. The company have been busy for a long while, getting things ready, and they are certain that October 1st will see the mill running full blast.

The millwrights who came from the east to put the machinery together have about completed their labors and their places will shortly be taken by the millers.

The first practical start was made yesterday, when the steamer Rainbow brought down from the ranches of Messrs. Benson, Gowdy, Matheson, McNeilly and Faulkner, on the lower Fraser, 60 tons of wheat, the first-fruits from that district of the Manitoba red Fife seed distributed by Messrs. Hall, Ross & Co., the mill owners. There was also a small amount delivered at the mill yesterday from H. King's farm at Cedar Hill. These are the only farmers who received any of the seed, yet heard from.

Mr. Hall, the Victoria manager of the mill, paid a visit to the ranches last week and found the farmers thoroughly satisfied with the result of their labors, some of the land averaging one ton to a ton and a half.

The flour made from this wheat is known to be far superior to that imported from Oregon, and for general purposes Mr. Hall is confident that they will turn out just as good an article as that made by the Manitoba mills. Other Island farmers will shortly have their crops ready for market, and it is hoped by all that the crops may all turn as successfully as those on the Fraser.

INDIANS TO THE RESCUE.

Three White Men Upset in the Straights—Narrow Escape.

The story of the adventure of a party of hunters in the Straits, on Sunday last, has not been told accurately, and one of the principals in what was an exceedingly dangerous episode has requested a correction of the published report. The party, consisting of three young men—two being seal hunters and one a railroad bridge contractor—left the foot of Johnson street on Sunday morning, in an 18-foot boat, belonging to the schooner Mary Taylor, for Peddar Bay. The party was bent on a hunting expedition, and expected to go into the mountains from Peddar Bay. It was well provided with arms, ammunition and provisions. The weather was calm and most of the distance across the Royal Roads was made by pulling at the oars. When four miles from shore and a short distance below Albert Head, the sail was run up to catch the light puffs of wind that began to blow; and the sprit not being quite high enough one of the party pulled himself up the mast a few feet to shove it into place. This caused all the trouble, for the centre of gravity being disturbed the boat turned over like a shot, and threw the men into the water. Three rifles, two shot guns, provisions, blankets, oil skins, &c., went to the bottom. The men, only one of whom could swim, got on top of the boat, which for half an hour only partially sustained their weight, sinking occasionally to a depth of two or three feet, and righting itself only when relieved of a portion of its weight. A short time before the accident three canoes, occupied by Hesquoit Indians returning to the west coast, had passed the hunters, and after the upset two of the canoes, containing nine Indians and three klootchmen, returned to the rescue. The Indians demanded $45, or $5 apiece before they would take the unfortunate hunters out of the water. This sum the men were unable to give—they only had $12 in their possession. The Indians, however, were relentless. They reminded the drowning men that they would certainly "go down to where the whales are" if they did not pay the money, and the boat taking another dive the hunters began to think that their position was hopeless. But the Indians becoming afraid, took the men into the canoes, and continued the negotiations under circumstances safer to both parties. The Siwashes, fully appreciating the fact that they had the three men at a disadvantage, insisted upon their demands being recognized, and intimated that a refusal would be followed by their immediate eviction. The hunters handed over all the cash they had, willingly promised the balance, the boat was righted, and all returned to Victoria. One of the white men was detained as a hostage while the other two went ashore and procured the money. The Indians were paid $48 in all and departed for Hesquoit, but the hunters have postponed their trip to Peddar Bay.

The Keg Blast.

The steamer Amelia will take a party of excursionists to Port Crescent next Saturday to witness the firing of the large blast by Mr. T. F. Sinclair the contractor for the breakwater at the new city on the straits. A large number are going and will no doubt be repaid by seeing something grand when the immense amount of giant and Judson's powders used on the work is simultaneously exploded.

Special Assizes.

A special court of assizes will be held to-morrow to try the cases of Mrs. Routledge, charged with shooting Jos. Dougan; the trial of the Wellington miners, and P. White, charged with assaulting a Chinaman will also take place. The cases will very likely occupy several days and business men who have to answer jury summonses are anxiously hoping that they will be excused.

A Highbinder Initiated.

A police officer who by chance was allowed to attend a meeting of the Chinese highbinder society, gives a very interesting account of the ceremony performed by the Mongolians when a new member is being initiated. After going through a ceremony that takes about one hour the chief of the society swears him in and then an English-speaking Chinaman repeats the Lord's prayer to some of the members. The latter part of the ceremony is evidently for those who are christianized.

Coming North.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Passengers per Walla Walla for Victoria: W. Edgar, M. Miller, M. Spaulding, J. H. Murray, C. Rosdrow, A. Miller, Miss R. M. Ivey, Mrs R. Mytine, C. D. Smith.

Single Tax Conference.

Delegates from the Single Tax Club in Victoria, Nanaimo, Vancouver and New Westminster, will meet in Vancouver about the first of October, to consider more effective methods of disseminating their principles.

Direct to London.

The total catch of the sealer Maggie Mac is to be sent to London direct for sale. Messrs. R. P. Rithet are handling the skins for owners. The skins are [illegible] and some of them being very large, and extra good prices are expected.

Kentucky Jean Pants

Made to order, $1.50; corduroy or strong tweed pants made to order, $3; superfine tweed pants made to order, $4. A large stock of ready made shirts, reefer jackets and overcoats on hand. Russell, McDonald & Co., 134 Douglas street.

The Westminster Fair.

The steamer Rainbow which left for Westminster this morning took up some 25 head of live stock for the Westminster exhibition. Some of the animals are sure prize winners, and will no doubt speak well for the Island on the Mainland. There were also other articles sent up by different parties for exhibition.

Will not Last Long.

The boot and shoe stock that is being cleared out by R. Hilbert at 74 Yates street will not last much longer. Mr. Myers, who has charge of the store, says that the stock is pretty well broken already, and that it wont be long before it will all be cleared out. Anybody in want of bargains will do well to call and examine the stock and prices before it is all gone. s18-1w.

The Railway Bonds.

Last week we mentioned that the bonds of the Shuswap & Okanagan railway were sold to Mr. Heaton Armstrong, a London banker. The bonds have arrived in this city in a strong iron box, and will be taken to Enderby by Vice-President Lumby to be signed. The bonds will be signed by Vice-President Lumby and Secretary Reilly.

Another Hotel at Vancouver.

Vancouver is to have another first class hotel. The gentlemen who are erecting the building are Messrs. Bowne and Robinson, the English capitalists. It will be situated on Abbott street and will include the present building known as the Wilson Block and the two lots to the south of the property on which it is situated. The new structure will be 62 feet by 80 feet and five stories high. The contracts have already been let for the remodelling and painting of the Wilson Block.

Nothing Much.

The docket at the police court this morning consisted of one drunk, badly battered, two black eyes and swollen nose. He had evidently met his match before he ran against an officer, who considered he had been used roughly enough and put him in more for charity than anything else. The receiver of the charity, of course, was the city, which received the donation of $5. Another case, that of two Chinamen charged with perjury, came up but contained very little interest.

A Change.

C. J. Fisher, who for a few months past has held the position of Union Pacific agent in this city has been transferred to Portland, where he will be raised a step higher in the employ of the same company. His friends in this city, although sorry to lose him are glad to hear of his promotion. Mr. Fisher is to be replaced by Morris J. Bissell, formerly of St. Joseph's, Wis., and a well known railroad man. He has been appointed general agent, which puts him in charge of all the company's interests in the city.

Sweet Charity.

The friends of Mrs. Soper, whose husband died suddenly about three weeks ago, leaving her in destitute circumstances, with two infant children to provide for, have collected the following sums of money, to enable her to return to her native home in Newfoundland.

| | |
|---|---|
| Mrs. O'Neil and Mrs. Rice | $33 00 |
| [illegible] Cook, Bank | 47 60 |
| [illegible] Clerks | 77 35 |
| Mrs. Whitefield | 17 00 |
| Congregation Methodist Church | 79 00 |
| Mr. Gardiner | 38 00 |
| Total | $721 55 |

Mrs. Soper will leave for Newfoundland on Thursday next.

Bad Luck on the Yukon.

A letter from Forty Mile creek, Yukon river, Alaska, says: "We have been out of luck this year on Forty Mile creek. The river has flooded us out all summer. The first flood cleaned everyone out of their wheels, flumes, ditching, etc. They all went to work and replaced their losses, and when nicely finished a second flood tore everything away. The river continued to flood all summer, so that the miners have had a poor season of it. A United States survey party arrived at Ogilvie's old winter quarters on the 19th of Aug. 1889, where they intend to winter, about 20 miles below Forty Mile creek, and another party went up Porcupine river.

AN EXTENSIVE JOB.

Thousands of Tons of Rock Taken Out—Canada Western Hotel Site.

Last April the contract was let to Mr. John Haggerty for the work of excavating the rock to form the cellar for the site of the Canada Western Hotel, corner Government and Humboldt streets. Since the middle of that month the rattle of drills and the roar of blasts [illegible] together with the roar of blasts as the rending dynamite tore the rocks asunder. Mr. Haggerty has had an average force of 50 men on at the work, and over 10,000 yards of rock have been taken out, seventy cases of giant powder having been used. White labor has been almost exclusively employed, and considering the extent of work the lack of accidents have been most noticeable.

The first contract with Mr. Haggerty did not embrace the whole of the work, but arrangements have been made and agreements signed whereby he goes on with the remaining part of the work, and by the end of the year the whole block will be excavated at the depth now made on the portion already completed. To do this will require the removal of about 3500 yards more of rock. That Mr. Haggerty has secured the contract speaks well for his ability to carry out such a work as this, and having the gear on the spot he will be able to rush the work to completion.

The Canada Western Hotel company are spending a lot of money in preparatory work on this property, and it speaks well for the push and enterprise of the gentlemen engaged in this undertaking. The expenditure of such sums of money as have been already made will be of much benefit to the city, to say nothing of the prospective amounts to be in the future used in building. Something like $25,000 will be expended on the excavations alone, and after that a quarter of a million will be used on the building. At first some people expressed doubts about the work being gone on with, but as the letting of the contract to complete the excavations has been done, there is no probability that any stop will now be made. The gentlemen behind the undertaking are too well known to admit of such an idea.

LABOR DAY AT NANAIMO.

A Very Large Gathering—Stirring Speeches Delivered, etc.

The labor demonstration in Nanaimo on Saturday, under the auspices of the Miners and Mine Laborers Association was a great success. The procession from Nanaimo formed about ten o'clock in front of the Templars Hall and proceeded to the E. & N. Railway crossing on the Comox road, where they were met by the Wellington, Northfield and East Wellington lodges. First came the Northfield brass band with the Union Jack and the Knights of Labor banner; then followed the Wellington lodge with the banners of M. & M. L. P. A. on which were inscribed "Union we want, eight hour work and the recognition of our Union." On another was inscribed "We can stand cold and hunger but not injustice." Then came the Northfield or New Wellington Lodge, bearing a banner with the inscription of "Eight hours we have and our Union recognized." East Wellington Lodge followed with the motto, "One for all, and all for one." The Nanaimo brass band with the fire department having their steam fire engine and hose reel beautifully decorated came next, followed by the boys of the public schools, carrying a very pretty banner bearing the inscription of "Religio, Scienta, Libertas," and "Let Nanaimo Schools Flourish." The Coast Seamen's Union bore the mottoes "Live and Let Live" and "Never Give up the Ship." Then came a long train of banners of all sizes belonging to the Knights of Labor and the M. & M. L. P. A., bearing the following inscriptions: "Eight hours for labor," "A wrong to one, wrong to all," "Eight hours for sleep," "Unite with us and add strength," "Let our march be from the school to the workshops," "The nation's greatness depends on the education of her children," "Eight hours for recreation and education," "Honest labor asks not for charity," "In unity there is strength." At the rear of the procession came a string of carriages, in the first one being Mr. Samuel M. Robins, Superintendent of the New Vancouver Coal Company, Mr. D. W. Gordon, M. P., Mr. G. Norris, proprietor and editor Free Press, Mayor Hilbert and Mr. T. Keith, M. P. P. In the next carriage were Aldermen George Baker, Wm. M. Hilbert, and Mr. S. Gough, City Clerk. The procession and those following must have numbered over two thousand persons and the line of route taken was through Comox road, Front and Commercial streets via Victoria Crescent, Grace and Haliburton streets and thence back through Nicol street. On the head of the procession arriving at the High School the whole of the ranks opened in order to allow the carriages to pass through, and as they passed the cheering for Mr. Samuel M. Robins was continually repeated. The carriages then took the lead to the "Green" where the procession took up a position around the large roped circle. Rousing cheers were given for "Canada and the Mother Country," "The United States," "Labor Organizations," "Coast Seamen's Union," and for "All employers who recognized organized labor."

The people were addressed in the afternoon by Mayor Hilbert, Editor Norris, D. W. Gordon, M.P., T. Salmond, and T. Keith, M.P.P. The speeches were on the question of labor, and specially in respect to the condition of workingmen at Nanaimo and Wellington.

The celebration was an immense success, and in the manner it was carried out reflected much credit upon those having it in charge.

Police Committee Report.

It will no doubt be some time yet before we hear from the police committee, and in the interim the best way the citizens can occupy themselves is to take a w around town and assure themselves that the best stock of stoves and jubilee ranges is to be seen at McLennan and McFeely's, 70 Yates street.

Keep Clean.

Across the Ocean.

A beautiful line of Razors, Strops and Shaving Materials can be seen at Fox's 78 Government street. Call and see the fine assortment of Pocket Knives and Scissors.

Will Go To Ottawa.

Captains O'Leary and Siewerd are to soon leave for Ottawa in connection with claims against the United States Government for the illegal seizure of sealing schooners in Behring sea.

Wish to Enter the Fold.

A petition was being extensively circulated and signed in Victoria West today which will be used to help that suburb to enter the city proper and be enclosed in the city limits. There is no doubt but that ere long the wish of those suburban residents will be listened to.

Not a Fireman.

In reference to an item about fast driving to the fire at Spring Ridge on Sunday, Chief Deasy informs us that the youth is not a member of the fire department. The alleged ill-treatment of the horse is denied by the owner, as is also the statement that bad language was used.

Provincial Labor Congress.

Arthur Dutton and Mr. Ireland, members of the Victoria Trades Assembly, leave for Westminster to-morrow morning to attend a convention of representatives of trades unions in the province. The object of the convention is to form a provincial trade and labor congress, which will make the unions as solid as possible and also join them closer together.

An Uncommon Occurrence.

At present there is neither an Indian or a Chinaman confined in the provincial jail. This is something that has not happened for a number of years, the oldest jailer not being able to remember a similar occurrence, the jail generally having at least two or three of each race behind the walls. This is another sign of the marked falling off in crime among the Indians and Chinamen, who a number of years ago were the chief actors in the courts of Victoria.

Beautiful Columns.

Eight beautiful polished granite columns for the new Methodist Church, consigned to Contractor H. H. McDonald came by last night's steamer. The columns are nearly five feet in length, and ten inches in diameter. They came out over the C. P. R. from New Brunswick, and arrived in first class order, their fragile surfaces not being scarred in any way. The stones will be used at the front entrance to the tower, and will be very ornamental when placed in position.

Another Victorian Home.

The contract was signed yesterday by Mr. McLarty, builder, for the erection of a residence on Dallas road, near Senator Macdonald's, for Col. J. Nicholles. The building will be built in the most substantial manner, and fitted with all modern improvements. Together with the grounds and outhouses the cost will be about $20,000. When the house and grounds are completed they will be an ornament to the city, and be one more proof of the fitness of Victoria for a place of residence.

NAUTICAL NOTES.

Items of Interest Along the Water Front—General Marine News.

The schooner E. B. Marvin will soon be hauled on the ways for repairs.

A large staff of men are at work on the new dredge, getting her ready for work.

The sealer Mary Taylor has been fitted with a new mainmast, and is being put into sea going order.

The sealing schooner Lily L., Capt. Walsh, has arrived at San Francisco with 1030 sealskins from Behring sea.

The steamer Mystery has been fitted with a new funnel, the first one not being large or high enough to create a sufficient draft.

The steamer Rithet arrived from Westminster last night with 144 bales of hay, 750 cases of salmon, 58 bales of hides and a lot of other produce.

The steamer Princess Louise finished discharging her northern freight this morning and commenced loading this afternoon. She goes north on Thursday.

The steamer Lottie, whose boiler has been renewed, and whose engines have been compounded, will be ready for business again about the end of this week.

An old steamboatman, named John Johns, known as "Jack," who has been employed for years as a fireman on the coast steamers, fell overboard from the steamer Irving into the Fraser on Sunday and was drowned.

The steamer Rainbow arrived from Westminster last evening with 60 tons of wheat for the Victoria flour mill and 100 cases of salmon for shipment east. She met with a slight delay while going from Ladners to Westminster with a load of salmon. The fog came on suddenly and was so thick that the anchor had to be dropped, but it was too late as they were on the beach. No damage was done.

The bark Henry Buck, Captain Miller, has arrived at San Francisco. The bark was 105 days on her passage up from New Castle, Australia. It was reported a few days ago that the W. B. Godfrey had spoken the Henry Buck in latitude 23 degrees north, longitude 146 west. She reported she had encountered a heavy gale off the coast of New Zealand and lost her foretop-gallant mast and flying jibboom. She was short of flour. The sea being rough at the time she was spoken, she could not be supplied.

A RIDING CLUB.

A Society Formed for the Purpose of Having Outings.

A meeting was held at the office of Turner, Beeton & Co., last evening, for the purpose of forming a riding club. There were present among others, Hon. J. H. Turner, Col. Holmes, Captain Ogilvie, and Messrs. Flumerfelt, Taylor, [illegible] Beeton, Pemberton, Baynes and Rattie. A large number of gentlemen were proposed and accepted as members. A committee was appointed to draft constitution and by-laws and they will meet at Davie & Bodwell's office on Friday evening for that purpose. The club will meet at the fountain, corner of Government and Douglas streets, on Saturday at 3 o'clock for the first ride out, and will be led by J. H. Turner. The club is composed of some of Victoria's most influential citizens and will without doubt turn out a grand success besides being enjoyable recreation for the members. Of late a good deal of interest has been taken in riding and as a consequence some fine horses are now seen on the roads.

SCIENTIFIC WORK VALUED.

Victoria People Throng the Parlors of the Great New York Optician.

The parlors of Mr. Seward, the New York optician, are thronged daily by ladies and gentlemen who are quickly satisfied that the specialist is a thorough master of his profession. He makes very careful tests in all cases before prescribing glasses and the high praise he has received from prominent people all over the United States will find an echo in Victoria or wherever Mr. Seward may go in the Dominion. A leading citizen of Vancouver, who has visited Montreal and San Francisco to consult leading opticians, failed to secure satisfactory glasses and in despair has sought Mr. Seward, who will fit him perfectly and thus improve and preserve his eyesight.

It is a fatal error for people to attempt to get glasses as they would gloves—at the nearest store. The eye is the most delicate as well as the most useful of all organs. If it were necessary to have new glasses monthly, it would be a serious tax, but properly fitted glasses will serve for years, and if one cannot afford to pay a fair price for expert work and fine glasses, the eyesight must be lightly valued.

Mr. Seward, the great New York specialist now visiting Victoria, will remain but a short time and persons who value their sight should give him an early call at the Driard House.
